Challenges

CHALLENGES AND LESSONS LEARNED

Since 2018, one of the challenges SEVAC Foundation Uganda grappled with has been the shrinking community operating environment due to constant threats from the State agencies against activities relating to good governance issues, especially corruption and service delivery advocacy.

The main lesson learnt from such threats is that organizations need to take precaution and ensure compliance with applicable legislations to avoid falling victim of arbitrary use of laws and institutions. Involvement of government institutions and senior officials also minimizes possibilities of institutions like the Police interrupting planned activities.

Delay by Local government to implement concerns raised by CSOs even when they pledge action, for example delayed monitoring of schools, hospitals and performances of public servants frustrated SEVAC Foundation Uganda's mandates and momentum.

The major lesson from these experiences is that CSOs need to sustain the advocacy efforts without relenting, until there is action. SEVAC Foundation Uganda has also learnt to involve multiple stakeholders who cumulatively become a formidable and influential voice. Much as some of the commitments have taken long to be acted upon, at least ultimately, some actions have been taken, and hence the efforts have not been in vain entirely.

-Engagement with the media as a strategy for advocacy and creation of public awareness remains costly, and worse still, sometimes it is a challenge to interest media houses in advocacy work when other social issues are taking Centre stage, since their focus is to outcompete rivals. SEVAC Foundation Uganda is working on strategies to improve her approaches in advocacy to make her work more appealing and news-worthy, as well as identifying influential professional reporters to work with for specific focus areas if issues of concern are to get media publicity

RISK MANAGEMENT

The Trustees actively review any major risks which the Charity faces on a regular basis and believe that maintaining reserves at current levels, combined with an annual review of the controls over key financial systems, will provide sufficient resources in the event of adverse conditions. The Trustees also examined other operational and business risks faced by the Charity and confirm that they have established systems to mitigate the most significant risks.

PLANS FOR THE FUTURE

At strategy review in September SEVAC Trustees confirmed their commitment to SEVAC's niche work funding unpopular causes that often have access to justice as an underlying theme. As we encounter an increasingly negative narrative about streets children and indeed the concept of human rights, SEVAC's capacity to be flexible and responsive becomes even more essential. We will work to ensure our grant making complements other initiatives, and look out for opportunities to work with others in furtherance of common aims.
